- (1) Choose that college which best met my ideal. For my undergraduate work, I should prefer a small college, where there would be opportunity in all of the classes for intimate social relation between student and professor. I should wish to attend a college where hard work was required, where scholarship was the motto, with strong intellectual men on the faculty, with properly equipped library and laboratories. I should prefer a college with high ideals in personal, community and moral life. I should want my professors to be recognized scholars in their several departments, endowed with enough force of character to win and keep my esteem.
- (2) Form correct habits of study. I should so dispose of my time as to work and play and sleep by schedule, so far as possible. I should strive to concentrate my mind, with all its faculties, on the study for the hour, never allowing it to wander off into day-dreams, realizing that incapacity for close attention to a subject squanders time, weakens the will, and foredooms to failure in life. I should be satisfied with nothing less than a mastery of the subject, endeavoring to assimilate the thoughts of the author and professor so that they would become part of my own mind, ready at hand to be used whenever occasions should require. I should join the debating club, and through its help endeavor to become a ready and fluent speaker. I might, perhaps, become a member of the musical and dramatic clubs, but not to the neglect of my studies.
- (3) Take plenty of wholesome exercise. I should join all the athletic teams I could possibly make, practice faithfully, and encourage my team-mates to their best endeavor; I should enter every game with the expectation of winning, but determined that if I should lose to lose like a true sportsman. I would avoid all late hours at social functions, if possible; abstain from the use of tobacco and alcohol in all their forms; endeavor to take all my exercise in the open air, and sleep eight hours in a well-ventilated room.
- (4) Choose my course of study with great care. If I had plenty of time and means at my disposal, I should prefer to devote the first two years of my college course to laying a broad foundation of liberal culture. At the beginning of my third year I should wish to specialize along those line which would lead to some knowledge of my chosen profession. At the end of my fourth year, I should endeavor to attend that university which had the best reputation and offered the greatest facility along the line of my life work. At this higher institution I would spend four years in diligent study and original research. Thus equipped, I should expect to enter upon my profession with pleasure, confidence, and success.

E, the Staff of THE WYO '15, are the heirs of our predecessors, and hereby acknowledge our indebtedness to them. The standard they have set we have endeavored to carry to greater heights. As to how far we have succeeded, we leave you as judges.

As a result of our labors, we deliver this Annual to you, hoping that it will keep fresh the memories of the present year. We are conscious that it is not complete; we know that it contains errors and omissions; we feel that we have failed in some things. But if you think that the production of a perfect Annual is a task easy of accomplishment, just try it and you will perhaps change your opinion.

We desire to acknowledge the invaluable assistance we have received from persons not connected with the staff. We are especially grateful to Miss Eugenia Federle, Mr. Garrett Price, Mr. Ralph McCullough, and Mr. George Flagg for their artistic sketches and designs, which have added materially to the appearance of our book; to Dr. Hebard, for her assistance in keeping a complete record of school events occurring during the past year. Our thanks are due also to Dr. A. C. Boyle, who has so generously given of his time and work in the taking and finishing of numerous pictures; and to all others who have assisted us by donating photographs, and by valuable suggestions during the course of the work, we desire to express our feeling of indebtedness.

In Memoriam

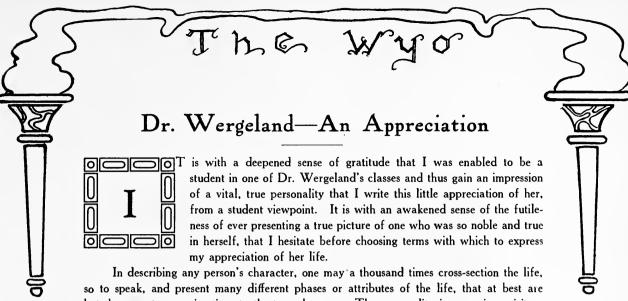

DR. AGNES MATHILDE WERGELAND.

May 9, 1857.

March 6, 1914.

Professor of History, 1902-1914.

"Faithful, patient, loving, with the heart of a poet and the keen mind that penetrates disguises and refuses to compromise with truth, she so lived as to give something of her own self-mastery to those who knew her, and to them she leaves a memory vital and beautiful."

In describing any person's character, one may a thousand times cross-section the life, so to speak, and present many different phases or attributes of the life, that at best are but the merest approximations to the true characer. The personality is a moving spirit or living energy that to be fully appreciated must be known as a personality. This is particularly true of Dr. Wergeland, whose character presents such a beautiful synchronization of so many varied talents and capabilities, that the spirit of the woman to be really understood must be known.

Artist, musician, poet, teacher, she was, but yet more, a unified personality, through which the light of a wonderful soul shone. To best bring a little impression of her true character to you, one had best describe only that activity in which he knew her best. As a professor and teacher, she mirrored in her work all of those qualities which made her so wonderful along other lines. As a teacher, she probably made a greater impression upon the University and its student body, than in any other way. As a writer and poet, she probably made a greater impression on the world.

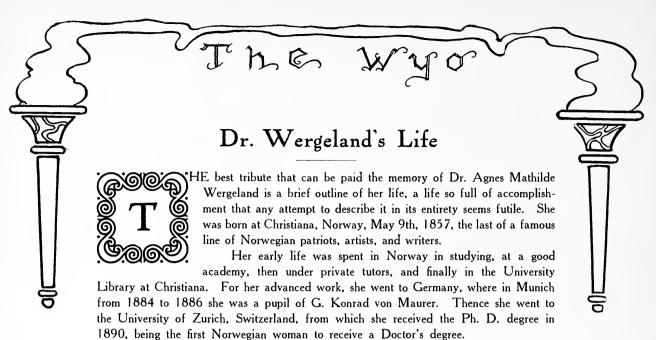

Her viewpoint of life and work can serve as an ideal and example for all students, which, if students could only appreciate it, would serve as a model for all future scholastic attainment. A few of her characteristics, discussed very briefly here because of space, seem to me to be the essential characteristics of true scholarship.

She possessed that characteristic, simplicity, which goes so far toward making beauty of character. Great lives are almost always simple lives. Her work was done simply and efficiently without ostentation. She possessed that trait of thoroughness that must accompany simpleness if real accomplishment is to be attained. Dr. Wergeland sought knowledge that was definite and accurate and spared no pains in getting that kind of knowledge. No detail that was worthy, deserved to be lost if it possessed the attribute of truth. But with this ability to remember detail, she also possessed a sense of proportion, of the eternal fitness of things, that kept her knowledge from becoming a mere conglomeration of facts without connecting links.

With these desirable intellectual attributes, there went a sweetness of character that ennobled her whole life. She was kind and gentle to all who came in contact with her. She was never sarcastic or cutting, but possessed a kindly humor that pleased without hurting. Throughout her life, an abiding love of nature comforted and cheered her. Flowers, birds, and mountains were her delight, the inspiration for her beautiful poetry.

Withal, her life was beautiful in the living, a well proportioned, artistic life, consistently lived in accordance with high ideals and an unswerving devotion to truth.

JOHN E. ANDERSON.

A fellowship, won in competition at Zurich, brought her to Bryn Mawr in 1890, where from 1891-1893 she was Reader in the History of Art. From 1895-1896 she was Lecturer in the History of Art at the University of Illinois, and from 1896-1902 Docent in History at the University of Chicago. In 1900 she returned to Europe, where she studied in Berlin for a time.

Dr. Wergeland came to the University of Wyoming in 1902, teaching History and French until 1909 and History and Spanish since that date. She taught Political Economy in 1902 and 1903, and in 1907 conducted a much valued seminar course in modern Norwegian and French drama. From 1897 to 1909 she was a non-resident Instructor in the Extension Division of the University of Chicago.

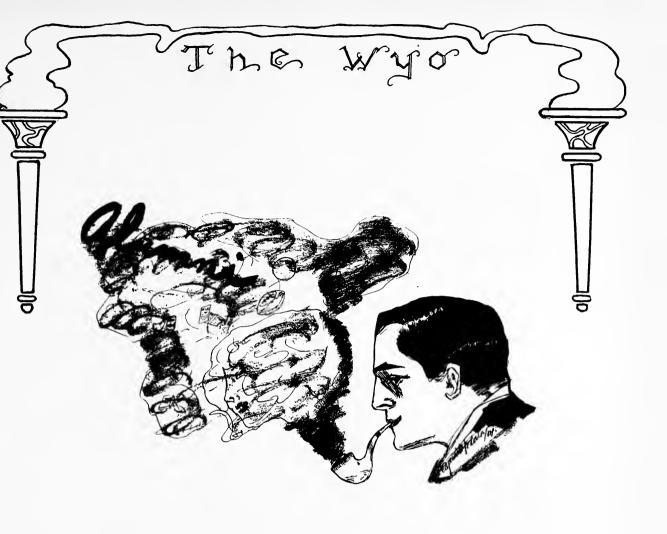

She died at the age of fifty-six years, on Friday, March 6, 1914, after an illness of five weeks, at the Doctors' Inn, the beautiful home which she and Dr. Hebard had built together and in which they had lived for the last eight years.

Dr. Wergeland was universally regarded as a most able woman. She was a wonderful musician, having been a pupil of Grieg, and an especially fine linguist, having a thorough knowledge of ten languages. Her brother, Oskar Wergeland, who died four years ago, was an artist of international fame. She herself had great artistic ability, making many fine sketches in both ink and color.

As a Professor of History, she was held in high regard. Ever since the appearance of her treatise on "Slavery in Germanic Society During the Middle Ages," she has been regarded as an authority on slavery and serfdom. For many years she was reviewer and critic for The Dial, The Journal of Political Economy, and The American Historical Review. She also wrote for The Woman's Journal, The North American Review, Poet Lore, The Theological Review, The American Architect and Builder, and was a contributor to the leading Norwegian periodicals published in both this country and Norway.

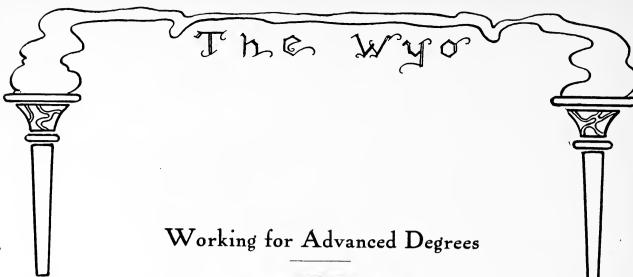

As a poet, Dr. Wergeland ranked with the leading modern Norwegian poets. She had published one volume of Norwegian poems, entitled, "Greater America," and at the time of her death had a second volume of poetry almost completed. Many of these poems have as their theme the scenery and beauty of Wyoming and the Western country.

Her life was filled with accomplishment, a life lived simply, nobly, and truly.

Seniors

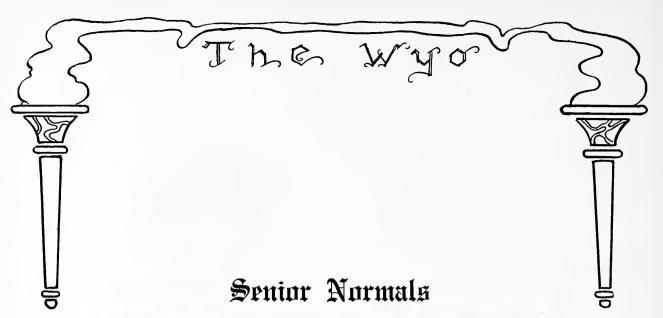

we come near the end of college life, it is but natural that we should pause for a minute and look back to see what we, as a class, have done. True, we have accomplished little compared to that which we planned in the days of our college infancy. When we entered as Freshmen, our plans for the University, the town, and the state in general, were so startling that perhaps it is well that they could not be carried out. We got over this idea quickly and set about to follow in the path of our illustrious predecessors, but with the intention of outdoing them.

It is not for us to say what we have done, but we do feel that we have not been altogether idle in the past four years. Our members, by reason of their capability, have become prominent in everything pertaining to the University. A. S. U. W., debating teams, glee clubs, Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A., every branch of athletics—all these number many Seniors among them; and also we see a great many 1914 names on the honor rolls of the University.

But these are all individual honors. As a class? Well, as a class, we have held firmly together; we have put forth our best efforts to help out our University, and in our future life we will try to so govern ourselves that all may recognize the inspiration that the University of Wyoming has given to the Class of 1914.

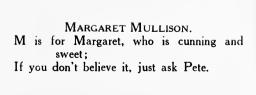

ELLA LYLE. E is for Ellen, her last name is Lyle. When she sees John, just watch her smile.

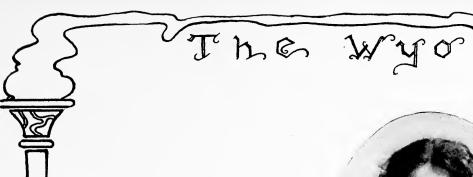

ESTHER OVERTON. E is for Esther, a sweet name; Everyone likes her just the same.

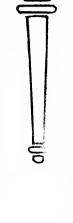

EMMA SMITH. Lesson plans so greatly vex this girl, She never finds time her dark locks to curl.

RUTH THOBRO.
Ruth, thy face an open book we see,
Which reads, "Here dwelleth truth and purity."

MYFANWY THOMAS. To Myfanwy we turn with many a smile, For bright she is and cheery all the while.

PECIALIZATION is the cry of the world. It used to be that anyone could teach the little folks in "reading, riting, and rithmetic," but how false this has been proven. Teaching primary grades is as much the work of a specialist as that of teaching language, science, or mathematics in colleges. It is just as hard, if not harder, for the primary teacher to teach the little folks to read their primers as it is for the college professor to teach young men and women to decipher hieroglyphics. For what is the primer but hieroglyphics to the six-year-old entering school?

This department offers opportunity for observation and practical application of principles of instruction and training in all grades of public school work. A thorough knowledge of child psychology with its bearing upon the work of education, together with observation of illustrative lessons in the training school, gives the prospective teacher ideals of teaching. In the Senior year these ideals are realized in the testing laboratory for pedagogical theory, the school-room.

From the primary onward the course is liberal, but not loose. It is the aim of this course to secure natural correlations which enrich but which do not encumber the child in his efforts to give the proper response. In this way, by proper adjustment of subject-matter to the individual, it is possible to accomplish in eleven years the same amount of work that is usually done in twelve years.

Every year a large percentage of the college Freshmen are drawn to this department by two forces, the efficiency of our faculty and the public's demand for trained teachers. There will not be one girl who will go from the Normal School this year without a feeling of regret at leaving, gratitude for the benefits received, and a longing to return again to our Alma Mater.

Juniors

or first we thought the small number in the Class of 1915 would be a great drawback, but we were mistaken. For the class has stood together so well and every member has been so anxious to do his part that we have found it a positive advantage.

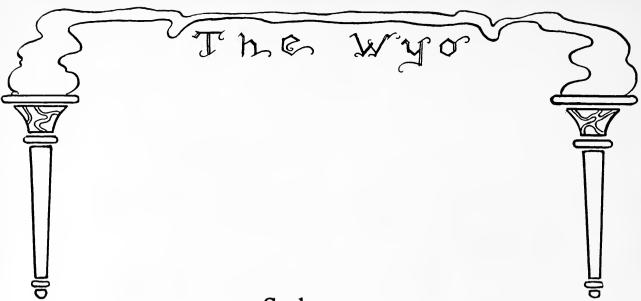

The members of this class have always taken a great interest in everything concerning the University. In athletics, debates, dramatic and literary work, and in the Christian Associations, our members have been foremost. One of the men has been chosen captain of the football team for next year; and several of the members have done good work on the Executive Committee of the A. S. U. W.

Every Junior class has two things to do: it must give a Junior Prom and put out an Annual. We met with such success with our Junior Prom that we feel that we can produce a WYO which, if not the best ever, will at least do us credit.

We only hope that the success of our Junior year will follow us as Seniors.

REMBLING, diffident, and green, we appeared in the halls of the University of Wyoming a year ago. We jumped when a Sophomore made his appearance; we spoke of the Juniors in terms of respect, and of the Seniors in awed whispers—we were so green, in fact, that we ran when the cows ambled toward us.

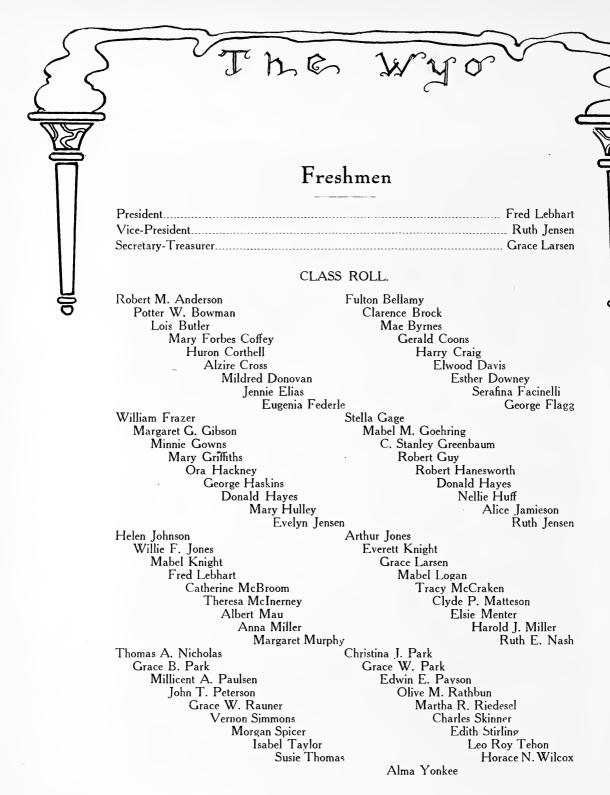

But times have changed and now we are lordly Sophomores, afraid of no man, or woman either, loving the Freshmen as brothers and treating them as such. Out of the greatness of our hearts we often notice them when we meet them, and sometimes, though this is not customary, we even speak to them. reverence and gratitude is our reward.

Despite the scenes of strife in which the Sophs have figured, our tempers are still unruffled and in our hearts is the peace of the just; for, securely guarded by watchful Sophomores, and completely hidden from the eyes of prying Freshmen, is that same Freshmen's flag which flared so bravely in the class basketball series.

Our eyes are now turned towards the time when it shall be our privilege to carry canes unmolested; but before that we hope to have proved ourselves loyal and royal Juniors, as our predecessors have proven themselves, by the production of an Annual which will perpetuate in the best way the memory of the Class of 1916.

The Rest of 'Em.

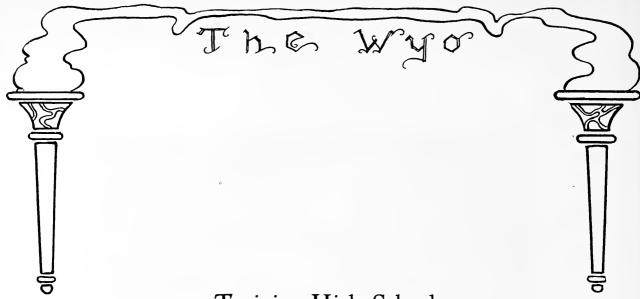

Freshmen

From the crop of University opportunities, '17 has won her share. Behind our zeal for '17 looms up our loyalty for the University of Wyoming. During the year we have instituted two college customs, by building a big stone "W" in sight of the campus, and by establishing the Freshman cap rule. Following last year's precedent, we won the interclass basketball pennant. During the year we have tried to be modest, unselfish, enterprising Freshmen.

(As you have probably observed, the above was written by a Freshman.)

While our teachers and professors
Take seats in a back row
To observe these trembling Seniors,
That things may go just so.

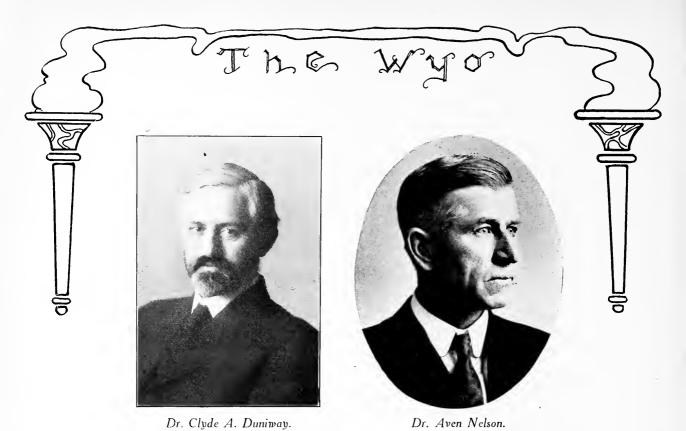

And, of course, there are other reasons For professors being there, Which we learn throughout the season As we climb Old Learning's stair.

Our place in the College life We must acknowledge small; But in all its glorious strife We are true to U. W.'s call.

For mutual progress and pleasure, We organized "Wyopre," Which gives us many a treasure From music, verse and play.

Then, Hurrah! for Training High School,
The best of W. U.;
To every member loyal
And to our College true.

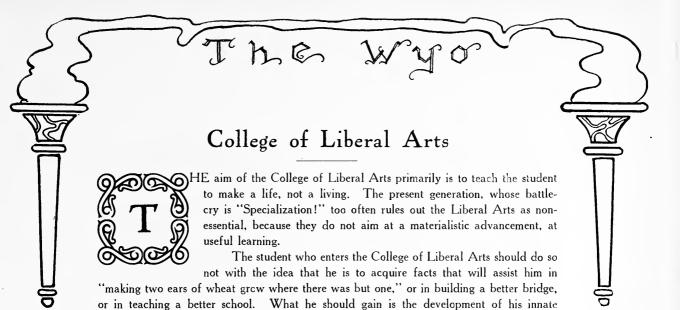

Prof. J. F. Soule.

Prof. C. B. Ridgaway.

The College of Liberal Arts aims to give a command of language by the careful study of our own tongue and of the modern and ancient languages. The most enthusiastic technologist cannot refuse to see the usefulness of this. For of what use is a great scientific discovery if there is not someone who can give it to the world in comprehensive English?

powers, tastes, and traits, those qualities which will make him a better teacher, farmer, or engineer, and the knowledge that he has those powers. He should form general conceptions which it will be his duty to apply and fit into whatever field of work he enters.

Dr. G. R. Hebard.

Dr. Agnes M. Wergeland.

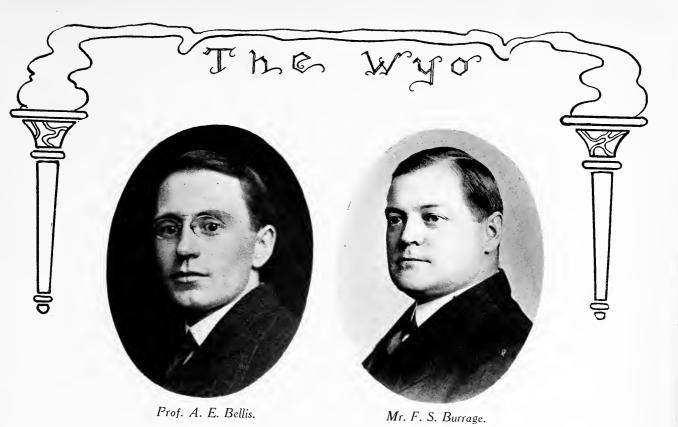

The entirely erroneous statement is sometimes made that the College of Liberal Arts seeks to exclude the sciences from its curriculum. What it excludes is not pure science, but technology. One of its main purposes is to inculcate the scientific turn of mind, the careful, searching, accurate spirit. This can be gained not only through a study of science, but also through work in languages. However, it recognizes that the sciences are invaluable as a training school for this spirit.

The College of Liberal Arts seeks to train the mind, to teach the how and why. It is not enough that an engineer use a slide rule quickly and easily. It is essential to the development of his reasoning faculties that he should know why certain combinations give certain results. He should be able to critically estimate; for what is life but an endless series of crises which demand a decision? The mind must be trained to think, to reason, or the student may fail, not only in making a life, but also in making a living.

Do not think that the College does not recognize the necessity of technical training. It only contends that this training should go hand in hand with the acquisition of this other learning—a learning almost impossible to define in specific terms. Coupled with the ability to do one thing a little better than anyone else has done it should be some literary or artistic taste which furnishes a continual source of pleasure, not only to the man or woman, but also to those who come in contact with them in life. And it is the aim of the College to "train the young to lead the fullest and richest life possible; to inspire in them a sense of spiritual values; to send them forth not merely with something to sell, but with something to give as well."

used to be generally understood that the Agricultural College was the laughing stock of the rest of the University. If you were an "Ag" in Wyoming, you were usually laughed at. However, this state of affairs has changed. It is with somewhat of a degree of pride that a student of Wyoming tells you that he is a farmer. He enjoys being out with the cows and pigs, and is quite proud of the fact that his face is tanned up.

The enrollment in the "Ag" College, which includes all phases of agricultural work, is growing fast. In fact, the percentage of increase in this College for the past two years has undoubtedly been greater than in any other department in the University. So great has been its growth that the Board of Trustees of the University deemed it wise to build a separate building for the Farmers. The new Agricultural Hall will be completed by the opening of school in September, 1914. This building will give the department a chance to grow and expand.

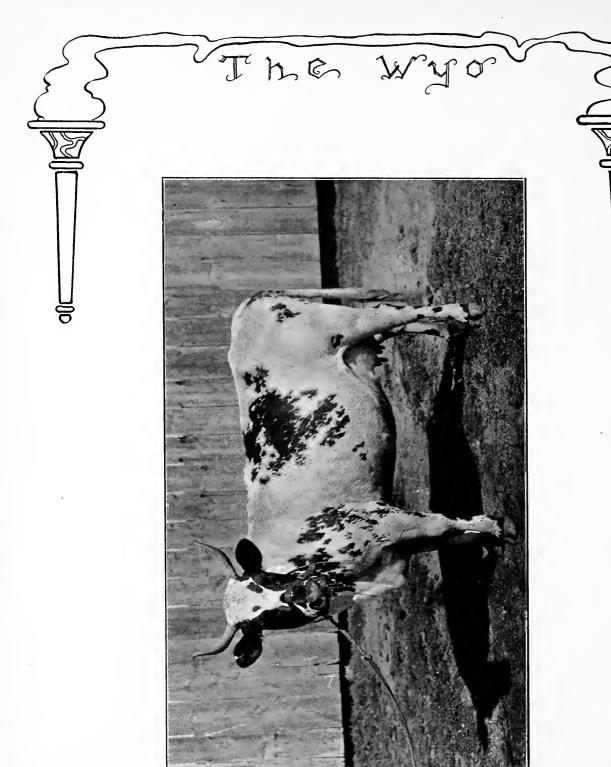

The Experiment Station, working with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is doing much to assist the farmers all over the state in improving their condition. Last July, Oviatt was appointed State Leader of Wyoming, and Bowman, Campbell, and McCarty his able assistants. These men travel about the state and mingle with the farmers, thus finding out their troubles and helping them in every way possible. It is no "stand-up collar" affair. The farm management man, upon arriving at a given farm, immediately jumps into his overalls and meets the farmer in his own sphere and on his own level. This department has only been running one season in Wyoming, but in this brief time results have been obtained.

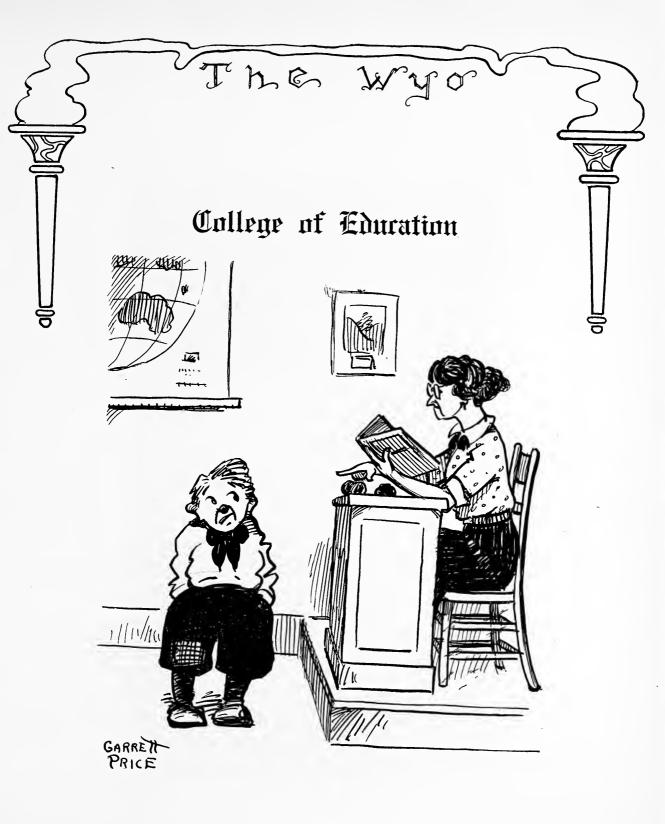

Not only have the Farm Management men of Wyoming a chance to raise the standard of living of the farmer of the state, but they have an opportunity to do a large amount of good in educating the average farmer.

College of Education

VERY year sees some new step forward in the organization of the work of the University. When in the future the grave and reverend chronicler records the history of the University of Wycming, he ought to set it down to the credit of 1914 that during that year the term "College of Education" appears for the first time upon the pages of its official documents. For a good many years the term "State Normal School" has done worthy service in the characterization of our work in the training of teachers. But "Normal School" has come to be applied in this country to institutions concerned mainly with the training of elementary teachers, the standard being a two years' course. So when the University had fairly well launched the scheme for the training of High School teachers through a four-year course of study, it was evident that the term had been outgrown. Hence the new title, "College of Education," which will include under its jurisdiction two departments: (1) the Department of Elementary Education (or Normal School), having to do with the training of elementary teachers, both for grade and rural schools, through a course of study of two years' duration above a High School course; and (2) the Department of Secondary Education, occupied with the training of High School teachers, the standard requirement being a four-year course ending with the A. B. degree in Education. The State of Wyoming can now refer with proper pride to the fact that she has a University which is regular in all her appointments for the training of teachers. Many older State Universities lack the complete scope of this organization, some being balked by the problem of establishing a practice school for the training of High School teachers, while others have left to separate State Normals the domain of training elementary teachers.

The outlook, then, from the point of view of organization, is hopeful; and young men and women in Wyoming who are looking towards this, "the noblest of professions, but sorriest of trades," ought to feel a pride in the thought that they need not seek their education beyond their own state borders. Students have all along been conscious that good positions in the elementary school awaited the graduate from the two-year Normal course. What we want now to get before the minds of young people, is that even better opportunities await those who will run the race to the four-year goal post and prepare for work in the High Schools of the state.

Department of Engineering

 $\begin{bmatrix} \mathbf{C} \\ \end{bmatrix}$

OIVIL ENGINEERING, according to historical accounts, has been called upon from time immemorial to aid man in his physical well-being and comfort, to help suppress marauders and to extend the boundaries of stable government. For example, the Imperial City, as it grew in population and importance, required a wholesome water-supply system. Highways had of necessity to be constructed in order that the commerce of the Roman world might be unrestricted in its ebb and flow. Furthermore, rivers were spanned and circumvallations protecting the numerous colonies completed. Wherever the legions marched, in their van and rear were found the men who planned and built for a present and future civilization. Many of their monumental structures have endured for twenty centuries and more. The famous bridge across the Rhine was the necessary initial step in the taming of the Teutons and in preserving the integrity of Gaul.

The engineers of the Renaissance were the harbingers of progress directing the way into the numerous and astonishing material activities and developments of modern times. Their spirit, as well as the impetus of those who followed the Eagles of Rome, is still with the world and is felt more today than ever before. Tardy and partial recognition is being meted out to those who plan and achieve for the well-being of their fellow-men. As an example, Sir William Willcocks was knighted for his services in designing and completing one of the greatest irrigation projects of modern times, viz., that of the Nile valley, which includes the great Assuan dam built across the first cataract. He is a graduate of the

Mr. Robt. J. Comper.

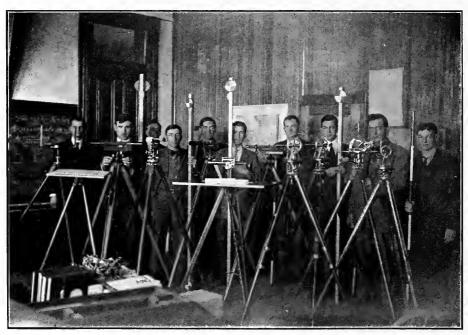

Mr. W. A. Hitchcock.

Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee, India, and gained his preliminary training in the irrigation works of the Northwest Provinces of that country. At present he is directing the operations put forth in reclaiming the ancient valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers, which have lain dormant for centuries under misrule and the ravages of war. The same recognition, although differently expressed, was accorded to those who completed the Suez Canal and thereby shortened the path of commerce to the Orient. In 1915 there is to be held an Exposition in commemoration of the fruition of a scheme dreamed of ever since the Spaniards crossed the American Isthmus, but for whose execution they lacked the persistence and ingenuity. It was left to the ubiquitous Yankee and to the science of the present day.

The basal classification of engineers has always been into those engaged in the affairs of civil life (civil engineers), and those who prefer the alarms and adventures of war (military engineers); and this grouping is even more accentuated today among the truly professional branches than formerly, notwithstanding the numerous ephemeral titles given to mere specialties. A general course of training is being demanded more and more in the material affairs of the world, since all true engineering problms are fundamentally the same, however important and attractive special solutions thereof may have become.

Much is being said against the various technical Engineering Courses at the present time, the charge being made that they tend to produce specialists along some one line, and that as regards broad, liberal training, for the problems of life, they are not to be compared with the courses offered in other departments. In short, engineers in general are supposed by some to be rough, uncultured barbarians, necessary of course to lay out railroads or build bridges, but unfit to mingle with so-called educated people.

In order to refute these arguments, it is only necessary to state that a person's true worth is not measured by his outward appearance, and that engineering is now regarded as much a profession as is that of law, or medicine.

It is a fact, borne out by the experience of the majority of the men who really "do things" in the world, that a scientific or engineering training is the best basis for advancement and success in the strenuous business competition of today.

The course at the University of Wyoming aims to instill a sound training of a rather extended character. For this purpose, the engineery of mathematics is necessary, not so much as a mental discipline, but as something required for daily use. Some define engineering as "applied mathematics," which possesses more than a grain of truth. In the Sophomore year the student may choose between the courses in Civil, Irrigation, Electrical, or Mechanical Engineering. In each of these courses there are capable, efficient instructors, and well-equipped shops and laboratories; and each year finds new instruments, books, and apparatus added to the different departments in our own State University.

Home Economics

OUR Department of Home Economics is growing rapidly. Why? Because each year more and more young women are realizing the value of the course; they see that for an all-round liberal education for women there is no course equal to it. Many, whose dominant interests are in Normal, Commercial, or Liberal Arts work, elect subjects in this department in order to increase their efficiency.

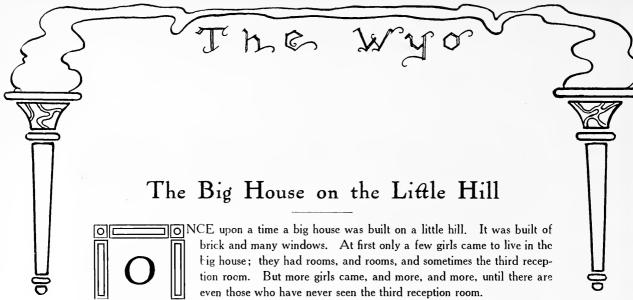

No longer is Home Economics ranked beneath other departments in higher education on the basis that it does not afford true culture. It has been proved that it imparts the highest sort of culture, since cultural education no longer embodies the study of dead languages, but rather that which tends to develop the individual to the highest efficiency and renders the individual capable of adaptability to environment. So, for this reason, the graduates of this department are given collegiate degrees.

The degree given in Home Economics now means that the student has given equal attention to the two phases of the work, Domestic Science and Domestic Art, and has taken training for teaching in both divisions, together with the accompanying work in Education. The size of the department and the lack of facilities do not warrant specialization in only one branch. But if enrollment in the department continues to increase as it has increased, it will be a matter of but a few years till the student may specialize in the work which appeals most to her interest.

even those who have never seen the third reception room.

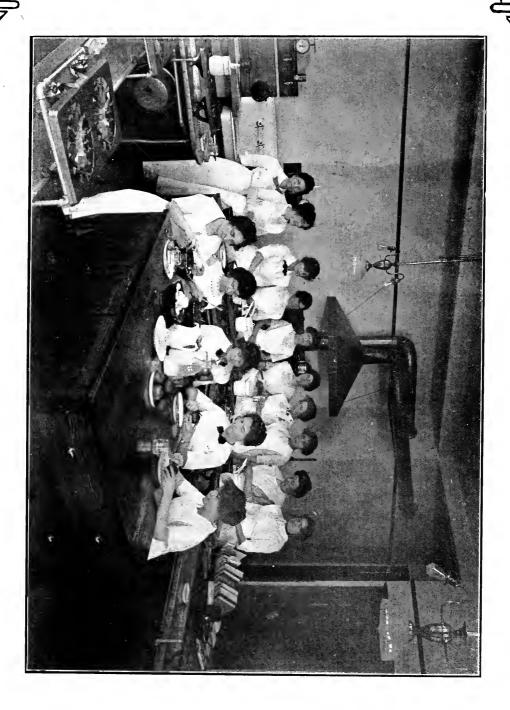

This big house on the little hill has more, though, than just a third reception room. It has an office with a telephone that rings and rings. It has a big parlor, and a second reception room, and a lecture room, and a front steps, and a back steps, and a great deal of hall space, and even a screen (ask a Junior; be sure and ask the right one, though, because the rest are innocent)—all for the use of fussers.

There are so many things that we might tell you about this house and the folks that live in it; so many things that have happened or might have happened here. This house is in a way a reformatory, not for the young ladies, please understand, but for the young men who come to see them. Selfish men have become unselfish, impatient men have become patient in waiting, and so on through a whole line of virtues and vices. Speaking of waiting, let me tell you a tale about a dream that a young man had one night while he was waiting for—no, I didn't tell her name—but anyway she is always the last girl down, and they do say that once he had to leave without seeing her, because the ten o'clock bell rang on time.

But about the dream: As I said before, he went to sleep waiting and dreamed that she came down early, that she dressed before dinner, and waited for him on the front steps, and answered the door herself. All this was because she was so anxious to see him. He dreamed next that there were a hundred third reception rooms, and that each one of the girls served something different to eat. He dreamed that Mrs. Knight stopped the clock, and said, "Curfew shall not ring tonight." He dreamed that Jerry never brought the bell back, and that the doors were never to be locked again. He dreamed that the girl who should have rung the bell broke both her arms, and also lost her inclination to ring bells.

He might have dreamed more, but she came down and waked him up—it was ten minutes of ten,

This, the new University Extension, is the ideal of Wyoming. What unfulfilled educational need is not the work of the state's university to meet? What instruction that cannot be given, what investigation that cannot be made, out of the broad training and interests of a large University faculty? Is there a farmer at Wheatland that needs advice; or a civic association at Cheyenne that desires council; or a Woman's Club member at Sheridan that wishes to begin a course in Sociology; or a teacher anywhere that wishes work and further credit in such cultural courses as history or literature? Or do those of scientific mind, living perhaps in the vast open spaces of the state, wish information on the geology and flora of the state? At little or no cost these and many other lines of information will be gladly furnished. As the people see the importance of this opportunity, no doubt the extension work will come to a large importance.

On the other hand, if the University is to prove the quality of its leadership, it is important for it to go directly to the interested citizens of the state. Leadership that is worthy of the name is based on intelligent service. Wyoming's needs may not be the same as those of another state. Leadership may very easily be misleading. What better then than to extend these lines of communication? Over them, as over the wires of a telegraph system, information may go and come. Incoming information may bring exactly what the University itself should have. The modern public university desires to take as well as give. To its students, not only on the campus, but within the larger confines of the state, it desires to teach the best that is known on how to build, how to live, how to think. The better to know its work, it therefore desires instruction, not only from its legislature and its board, but from any of the thinking citizens, as to their intellectual desires and needs.

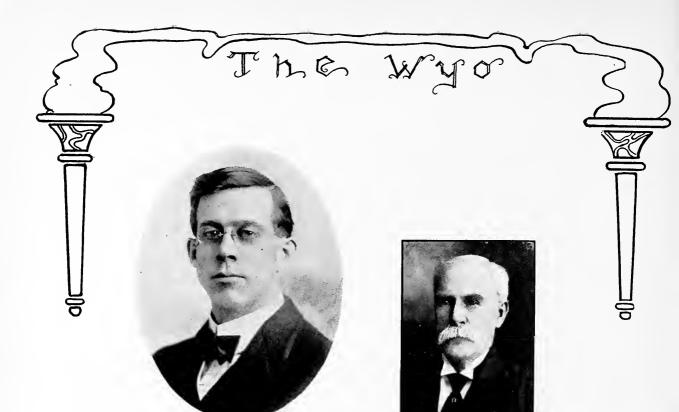

May the extension work rapidly increase. May there soon be more who are carrying on their studies from outside, those present in spirit though not in body, than of those who are in actual residence. This is already the case in at least one other state. With every step in the extension work, the state university comes nearer with the commonwealth. With a larger and more democratic training, the citizenship will more rapidly come into its rightful heritage. That heritage, as the extension instructors now see it, must be no whit short of intelligent democracy which is able to pick for all departments of its service its best trained citizens.

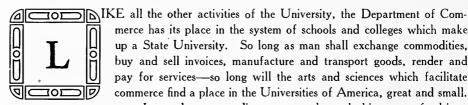

GARRET

The Department of Commerce

Mr. M. J. Mallery.

Prof. E. Deane Hunton.

Learned men may disagree as to the rank this group of subjects ought to hold in the scheme of a liberal education, but none will have the temerity to eliminate them from practical training. Indeed, the "signs of the times" point to a more generous recognition of the claims of Commerce upon the scholar, while more and more he feels the need of that business sense, so much strengthened by systematic training, which records and guides and forecasts and directs the entire activities of the world.

To satisfy this group of wants men and women must have special instruction and training, both for their own protection and fitness for the service of others. Whatever is necessary to the business house, the bank, the manufactory, the transportation company, the trust, from the humble typist and clerk to the auditor and manager thereof, all must have training—and the days of apprenticeship are over. Technical training now belongs to the schools, and the University at the very summit must bear its share or the struggle for existence will take a backward trend.

In this institution the business student of either sex may have access to the College of Liberal Arts, of Education, of Applied Sciences, Agriculture, Domestic Science, Music. Young men and women need not remain ignorant because they wish to become useful. All the refinements of culture are open to them as to the other members of the student body. College degrees await the diligent, careers of eminence beckon to them; the world is impatient for their coming. Thus, elementary teaching by trained business men, advanced instruction by recognized specialists, such as the ordinary business college does not attempt, is provided at every stage of advancement and on such a liberal scale that comparison disappears and the University student of Commerce stands out a leader among leaders.

Dieser Verein hat die folgende Absicht, die Wichtigkeit des Wissens von deutschem Leben, deutschem Gebrauch, deutscher Literatur and deutscher Sprache zu unterstützen.

Während des letzten Jahres sind vielle sehr interessante und lehrreiche Programe in den Versammlungen, die jede zwei Wochen, Donnerstag Abend, statt finden, vogestellt worden. Die Versammlungen werden auf Deutsch geführt und die Programe werden auf Deutsch gegeben. Deutsche Lieder werden immer gesungen. Am acht und zwanzigsten März dieses Jahres hat der Vërsin ein Schauspiel, Eigensinn, vorgestellt.

R. W. THACKER, A. B. Director Physical Training.

Coach Thacker

The athletic write-ups of the Annual would be incomplete if they did not contain some mention of our coach and physical director, Ralph W. Thacker. The coach received his early training in Olivet and Michigan Agricultural Colleges, where he made a name for himself athletically. He was remarkably good in both football and baseball, playing four years on both teams. After leaving college, he took up coaching and Y. M. C. A. work, and has turned out some very good teams since then.

Last year when the Varsity found herself without a coach, she was able to induce Thacker to come here and take the University athletics. From the start he made a hit with the men who were working under him, and with the whole student body in general, both as a coach and as a good fellow. The coach uses a system of coaching that is extremely up-to-date, and in football he is an advocate of enough of a mixture of the old and new style of playing to keep the other team guessing. Also, because of his medical training, he is able to keep his men in the best physical condition.

It is quite unfortunate that the fellows have not been able to partially show their appreciation by turning out a winner. There is one thing that is quite evident, however: that the men have begun to wake up and show a fight that is going to win many games in the future. This is due to the coach more than to anyone else, for "his middle name is fight."

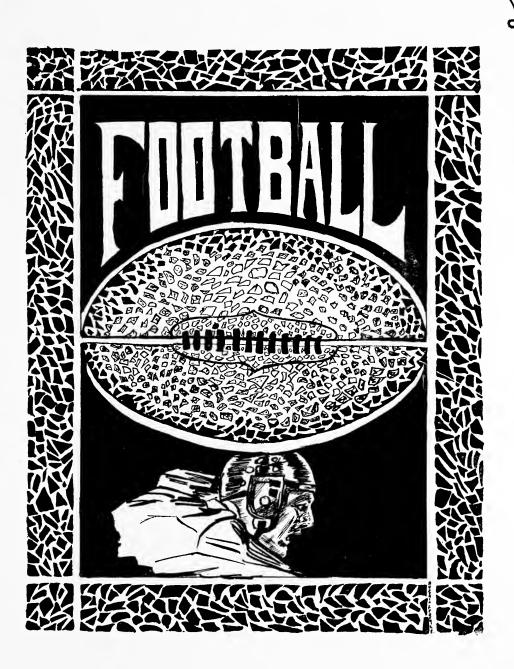

"W" MEN.

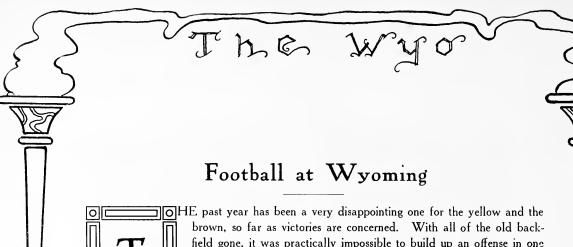

The following men have received recognition by being presented with sweaters:

Football—Captain Regers, Thompson, Davis, Hitchcock, N. Rogers, Pierce, Bennitt, Irwin, Craig, Flagg, Wilcox, Simmons.

Basketball—Captain Skinner, N. Rogers, Davis, Craig, Knight, Pierce, McCraken, Thompson.

Football Reserves-Mau, E. Davis, Drcw, Spielman, Clearwaters, Spicer.

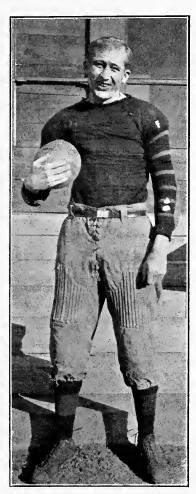

E past year has been a very disappointing one for the yellow and the brown, so far as victories are concerned. With all of the old backfield gone, it was practically impossible to build up an offense in one season that could meet and outplay the veteran backfields of Colorado. The schedule itself, due to no fault of those in charge, was very poorly arranged for a new and light team like ours. The hardest game of the season came less than three weeks after school started, and it seemed that, owing to injuries or some other cause, every game was played at a disadvantage to the Varsity.

However, the outlook for next year should be considered quite bright. With ten letter men back in school, it will make a very good nucleus around which to build the new team; also there are several men who have been unable to play this year on account of entrance conditions. These, together with the new men who will undoubtedly enter in the fall, will give the University a squad which should be a winner.

Another thing that will be a great help to the team is the fact that we will have the same coach again, and he will be able to place the old men without any early season experimenting. There is every reason to believe that the athletic conditions at the University are going to make a change for the better in the next year.

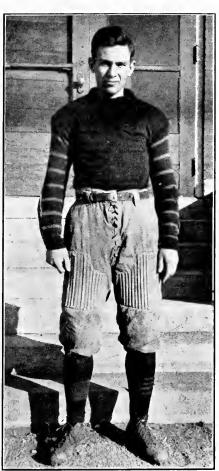

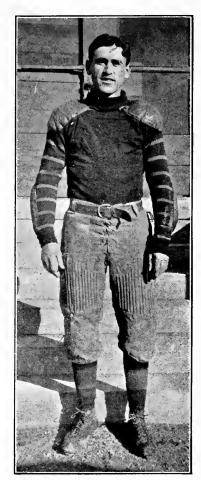

HARRY ROGERS, '14.

In Cap the Varsity loses one of the best linemen it has ever graduated. For three years he has starred at both tackle and end. Because of his brainy and aggressive playing and his popularity among the fellows he has made an ideal captain, and one of the hardest propositions of the coming season will be to fill up the hole that he has left in the team.

NEIL ROGERS, '15.

That "Scissors" stands high as a player in the estimation of his team-mates, is shown by the fact that they elected him captain for next year. He has missed but twenty minutes of play in three seasons.

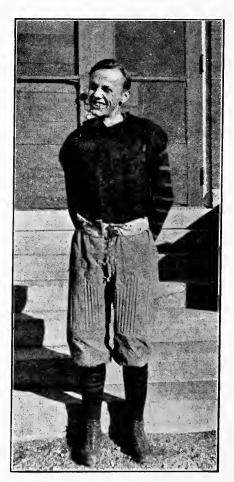

LYNN THOMPSON, '14.
Tommy leaves school this year, after three seasons of hard playing. He has put up a strong game in both the line and backfield.

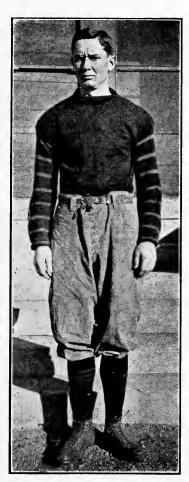

JAMES DAVIS, '15.

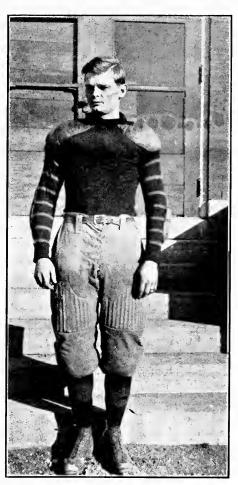

Jimmy put up a big fight at quarter, and ran the team in fine shape. He is probably as fast in a football suit as any man in the West.

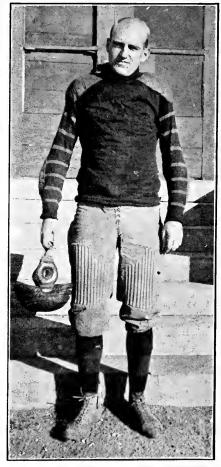

Pete was moved from his last year's position at guard to a tackle, and strengthened the team greatly. He is one of the speediest and most aggressive players on the squad.

ERNEST HITCHCOCK, '15.

In Ole the Varsity has an end who has played two years of scrappy football, with his best year yet to come.

DORMAN BENNITT, '15.

Ben played a scrappy and consistent left guard. He played his best game against Boulder, where he was the star of the line.

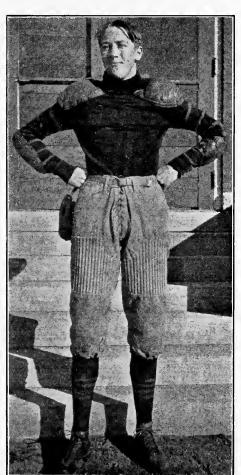

JOHN PIERCE, '14.

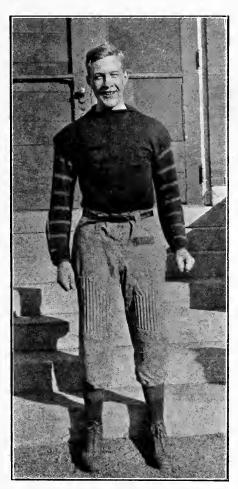

Johnny, although small, put up a good game at halfback. He was especially good on the defense and broke up many forward passes.

Craig played a steady game of fullback throughout the year. He did most of the punting and passing.

Horace Wilcox, '17.

Jack is one of the men who made the Varsity in his first year. He played a good game at guard and will be a help to the team for several years to come.

GEORGE FLAGG, '17.

Although a beginner at the game, Flagg put a lot of pep in his playing and will make a very good man next year.

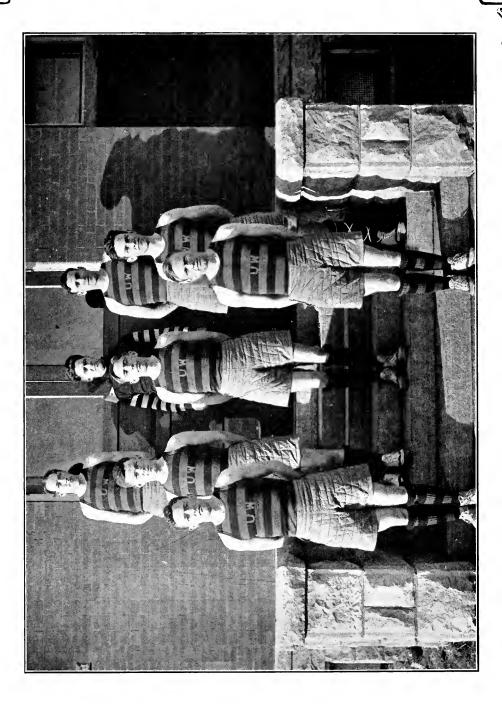

Simmy is another fellow who made the team first year out. He is a fighter and puts up a strong game at either tackle or end.

Buskethull

FRED V. SKINNER.

"Cap" ended his basketball career this year, after four seasons of hard playing. He played a very steady game at guard and usually held his opponent to but a few baskets. It will seem quite strange to have a team next year without Fritz at one of the guards.

Basketball Season of 1914

There was much interest taken in basketball this year. At nearly every game the gym was packed; especially during the interclass games there was more spirit shown than at any time during the past few years.

The schedule was really too short for the team to get going. In the last game of the season against the Utah Champs, the team put up a better battle than any of the Colorado teams who played Utah.

In the interclass games several new men showed up well; the Freshmen especially made a good showing by cleaning up the other classes. This goes to prove that the basket-ball talent at the Varsity is improving instead of getting worse.

Winter Scene on the Campus of the University.

Miss Margaret Arnold, '14, of Evanston, welcomed the new students to the University, and Mr. George Flagg, '17, of Lander, responded in behalf of the new students. Miss Lena Brooks, '15, sang two beautiful songs, replying to an encore with the Wyoming state song, which proved very popular. Judge V. J. Tidball, '05, on behalf of the alumni, invited the Class of '17 to become members of the Association four years hence.

The rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

JUNIOR AND SOPHOMORE PARTY.

President and Mrs. Duniway entertained the Classes of 1915 and 1916 at a delightful "at home" on January 17th, 1914. Each guest was given a blank card and a pencil on which to record the results of certain psychological tests of the five senses. Needless to say, the Juniors especially showed great ability in these tests.

After delightful refreshments had been served, the two classes gathered around the piano and sang many familiar songs until it was time to bid the President and his charming wife good-night. The occasion will be long remembered by the members of the Junior and Sophomore classes.

DR. AND MRS. DUNIWAY'S PARTY TO THE CLASS OF 1917.

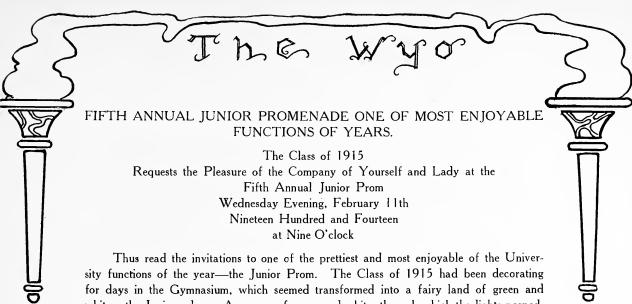

One of the most delightful parties of the year was that given by Dr. and Mrs. Duniway to the Class of 1917. The memory of this event is one of the happiest recollections of the whole school year, for Dr. and Mrs. Duniway have the rare gift of making even the shiest Freshman feel perfectly at home the minute he reaches the door.

On arriving, the guests were all tagged with their names and home towns. made it easy for everyone to get acquainted.

In a conspicuous place on the wall hung a large placard marked "Prexie's Menagerie." Two other cards with the legends "Frenzied Fishes" and "World Wonders-Bloody Beasts Regardless of Reason," set the guests to wondering what was going to happen. But Dr. Duniway soon answered that question by telling them that they must name the ferocious beast, slippery fishes, and terrible fowls which were imprisoned in thirty-three cages. Then a lively contest ensued, and for several hours the Freshmen worked harder than they ever did on Latin or English One. When notes were compared later in the evening, much merriment was aroused by the queer guesses.

After a most exciting spoon game, in which the women proved themselves more adept than the men, the Freshmen did great justice to the dainty refreshments.

The house rang with songs and college yells until the time came to say "Good-night."

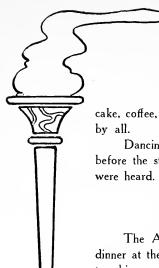

Thus read the invitations to one of the prettiest and most enjoyable of the University functions of the year—the Junior Prom. The Class of 1915 had been decorating for days in the Gymnasium, which seemed transformed into a fairy land of green and white—the Junior colors. A canopy of green and white, through which the lights peeped, swayed and billowed and rustled like the swaying and billowing and rustling of millions of restless leaves. From the center of this canopy hung an enormous square basket filled with ferns, which, when illuminated from within, flashed to all sides the numerals '15. This symbol of Wyoming's coming Senior class was also seen at both ends of the floor and on the sides.

The upper end of the Gymnasium, the walls of which were draped with green and white and decorated with numerous athletic contrivances, had been set off from the rest of the floor with a latticed fence, covered with white orchids and green leaves. Great pots of palms were placed on the posts at each end of the lattice. Within this enclosure were the coziest cozy corners, rugged and chaired and lounged and ferned, where the weary ones could rest. Here also appeared the University colors in the Wyoming blanket which covered the center of the wall. The lower end of the hall was also latticed off into two bowers, where the punch was served.

By shortly after nine o'clock sixty couples had passed through the receiving line, which included Mr. and Mrs. Burrage, Prof. and Mrs. Bellis, Mrs. Knight, Lieutenant Daly, Mr. and Mrs. Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. Thacker, Mr. James Davis, the President of the Junior class, and Miss Mary Hollenback, Secretary of the class.

Johnson and Carr's five-piece orchestra then struck up the grand march, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. Burrage. Just before the close of the march, each gentleman was given an envelope which contained two beautiful leather programs—one, the lady's, a dainty white, the other a lustrous green. On one cover of the program, the seal of the University of Wyoming was stamped in gold, on the other the numbers 1915. These programs held a double value, since they could be transformed into very pretty card cases by simply removing the order of dances. The dances were dedicated to the Faculty, the Seniors, etc., with two Moonlight waltzes, which were danced by the light of the glowing fern basket in the center of the Gymnasium.

The sixteen pretty High School girls, who served the punch, afterwards served the delicious supper. Twenty tables, each accommodating two couples, were arranged around the running track. In the center of each table was a lighted candle, which, shining through a green shade, showed '15 in white. White sweet peas and ferns made a very pretty table decoration. Chicken salad, sandwiches, olives, green and white ice cream, cake, coffee, and green and white twisted mint sticks were served and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Dancing was resumed after supper, and it was the wee small hours of the morning before the strains of "Home, Sweet Home," announcing the close of a perfect Prom, were heard.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA.

The Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity entertained at a three o'clock Thanksgiving dinner at their house at Tenth and Thornburg. The long table which stretches through two big rooms was beautifully decorated with red candles and shades, great bunches of red carnations and white chrysanthemums, while the place cards were dainty programs, afterwards used for the dance, and the nut cups were turkey boxes. Some of the girls from the Laramie High School served the delicious dinner while Miss Johnson and Miss Carr played.

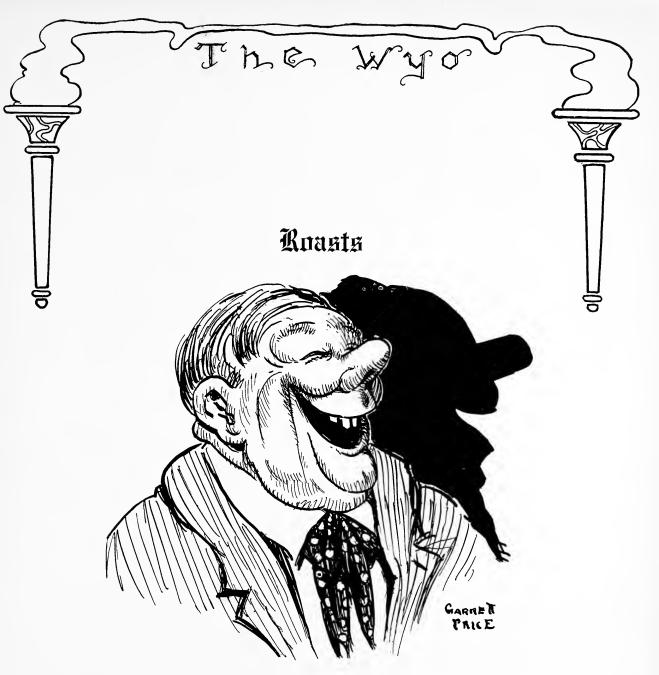

Mr. Harry Rogers acted as toastmaster, and a number of the guests were called upon for toasts or afterdinner stories. The clock had struck six before the fifty people left the table. Afterwards the fraternity's pledges gave a short, clever program, the chief features of which were a mock marriage and an exhibition of mind reading. Mr. and Mrs. Reilly sang charmingly, and Mrs. Thacker gave several piano selections. About eight o'clock the young people went to the Knights of Pythias Hall, where they danced until after midnight. The chaperones for this delightful affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Bellis, Mr. and Mrs. Thacker, Mr. and Mrs. Reilly, and Mr. and Mrs. Ingham. The out-of-town guests were Miss Frances Davis and Miss Agnes Wright of Cheyenne.

SIGMA BETA PHI SMUSTER.

The official closing of the tenth year of the Sigma Beta Phi Fraternity's history was celebrated at the Connor Hotel on the evening of December 9th, by the Tenth Annual Smuster. December 9th is Founders' Day, and the return of this day each year is marked by a banquet. The menu cards were pretty little azure and wine folders that contained a dance program and lists of the members of the fraternity. A bunch of violets, the official flower, appeared at each girl's plate. Mr. George Abbot, the President, most fittingly opened the celebration with a short speech, followed by the interesting ceremony that always opens a Smuster.

After the banquet came the toasts, always a feature of such an occasion. Mr. John E. Anderson presided as toastmaster, and President Duniway, H. S. Rogers, and Coach R. W. Thacker responded with most entertaining toasts. As no definite subjects were assigned, the toasts had a spontaneous, original character, that added much to the charm of the banquet.

After the tables were cleared away, the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. The patronesses of the Smuster were Mrs. C. A. Duniway, Mrs. R. W. Thacker, and Mrs. E. D. Hunton. Thus, most fittingly, was the eleventh year of the Sigma Beta Phi Fraternity opened.

OUR MOTTO: "With malice toward all, and charity toward none."

"We are members of the Anvil Chorus, Knockers all are we; Profs and students here before us We shall hammer gleefully."

A Freshman from Basin one day
The bell from the Dorm took away,
But with Mrs. Knight
He made it all right
By taking it back the next day.

COULD YOU CONCEIVE-

A student even whispering in the library? Any of the faculty not talking aloud in the library?

Babe McC. having a lesson?
Where Frances F. got her diamond?
Tech studying for a recitation?
Peggy doing the tango?
Trace not talking?
Francis Macbride with a girl?
Prof. Reilly singing ragtime?
Doc Davis leading chapel?
Ben with curly hair?
Sharp and Williams as millionaires?
Jerry getting an "I"?
Serafina yelling "I'll scream"?
Evelyn J. saying to Jerry, "Keep it mum"?
Williams having a case like Brown's?

Local Wit (as the covers are torn off the "Wyo" boxes): "I see they've started to knock the "Wyo" already.

AT A DANCE.

Ruth Jensen: "Who's that good looking fellow?"
Esther Downey: "Oh, you mean Tech Davis?"

Ruth Jensen: "Oh, no; I mean that intelligent looking fellow."

Nicholas: "Lend me a nickel, will you? I want to get a square meal."

Lebhart: "Sorry, pard, but I board at the Commons myself."

The motto of any Senior: "I have never seen a greater miracle in the world than myself."

KNOWLEDGE THE JUNIORS INHERIT.

From-

Trace: How to keep up a monologue in a crowd.

Thompson: How to argue.

Alice Downey: How to pass for a shark. Sutty: How to fuss and also how to sing.

Marie Freeman: How to serve a six-course dinner for a dime.

John Anderson: How to edit a "Yellow Number."

Lucile Wright: How to get a Mann. Bankie: How to say "By jolly."

Margaret Arnold: How to regulate the conduct of Pi Phi Freshmen.

Tech: How to recite a lesson without first studying it.

Edith Hynds: How to star in a play.

Shorty Pierce: How to beat a Freshman's time.

Mildred Hicks: How to speak all languages.

Bunny Abbot: How to be a "bum manager."

Lucy Taylor: How to see the sunny side of life.

Butch Cook: How to smoke "Fatimas."

Oakley Overton: How to command an army.

Herpy Rogers: How to be fickle.
Francis Macbride: How to get a case.
Wallace Taylor: How to carry a cane.
Selma Lauritsen: How to get a cut in on time.

Lida Smith: How to maintain silence.

"Don't sigh," Brown said, "For we will wed

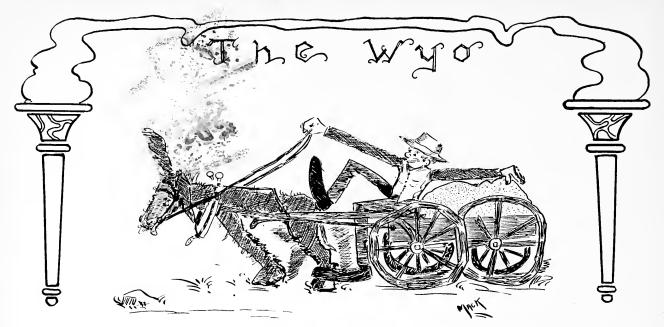

As soon as I graduate."

"But, my! Oh, my!"
Was her reply,

"That's so indefinite."

Oh! you Tag Day.

BEATITUDES.

- 1. Blessed is he that bringeth chocolates when he calleth, for he may call again.
- 2. Blessed is he that jumpeth not assembly, for he shall be exalted by the profs.
- 3. Blessed is the sorority girl who knocketh not her rival, for she is a myth.
- 4. Blessed is he that smoketh not, nor walketh in the path of the unrighteous, for he, too, is a myth.
- 5. Blessed is he that taketh a lemon to a dance, for he shall attain fame in the dorm.
- 6. Blessed is the prof that believeth not in final exams, for he is beloved of all students.
- 7. Blessed is the chaperone who winketh at late comers, for she is beloved of all fussers.
- 8. Blessed is he who turneth back the dorm clock, for he, too, is beloved of all fussers.
 - 9. Blessed is the Freshman who liketh to drill, for he is not to be found.
 - 10. Blessed are the faculty who visit the library, for there they may talk aloud.
 - Blessed is the referee of the class basketball series, for he is virtually a martyr.

A SERIO-COMEDY IN LESS THAN ONE ACT.

Time: Sunday evening. Place: On the path leading to the dorm.

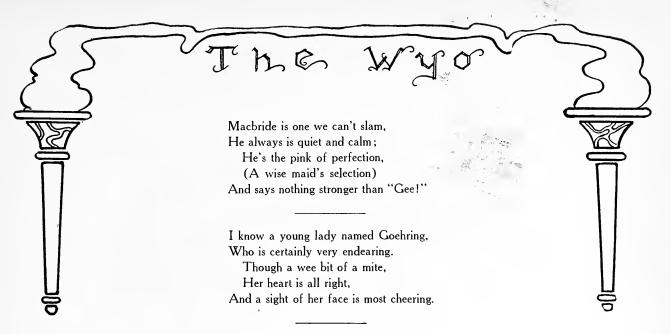

Dramatis Personae: Rev. Wright and Jim Davis.

Rev. Wright: "Young man, do you ever attend the house of worship?"

Jim Davis: "Yes, sir; I'm on my way there now."

Mau: "What can I do for water on the knee?"

Craig: "Try wearing pumps."

ANY CHEM. FRESHMAN.

Here's to Chemistry with its cute gas jet; Here's to the 1's and 2's I haven't seen yet. Chemistry haunts me with every breath; I'll bet that it bothers me after my death. If I get through this year, I'll be chuck full of glee, And I'll ecstatically say, "No more HNO₃."

A Case You Didn't Know About.

POET: "OLE" HITCHCOCK.

On the football trip to Fort Collins: "Let's go to dinner, before we get any thinner."

The corn is waving in the field, The beans denote a handsome yield. All Nature smiles, and it's a "pipe" The succotash will soon be ripe.

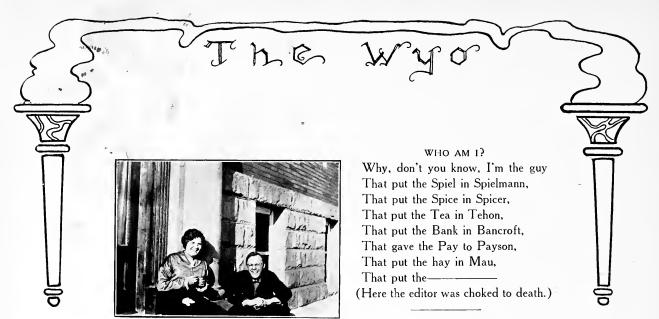

Mr. Reilly (in orchestra practice): "Is that the oboe (hobo)?"

Jimmie (as Mr. Burrage enters): "Naw it's just Burrage."

Peterson (watching Herpie try on a dress coat): "Now button it up and let's see how you look."

Miss Whitcomb: "Can you give the name of another predigested cereal?"

Marie Freeman: "Peruna."

McCraken: "Doctor, my eyes have been troubling me of late. I continually see red and black spots.

Dr. Turner: "Well, my boy, you had better quit playing cards."

On Mabel G.'s exam paper: "Browning's poem about the 'One Kiss' means so much more to me now than it did in September." (This was just after she had returned from her visit in Cheyenne.)

Post card from Fred Skinner, in Greeley: "We got walloped, fellows. But there are some chickens here."

AT Y. W. MEETING.

K. E. B.: "Frances, you are sitting on a hymn."

Frances F.: "Well, it isn't the first time."

Prof. Creager: "Are those text-books?"

Tech: "No, they are not mine."

Bancroft (in Farm Machinery Class): "In the end of the pitman of the mowing machine there is simply a wooden hole."

Larson: "Would you like to use some of my blank verse?"

Simmons: "I don't need your — — verse."

Evelyn J.: "What is a good thing to write a ten-page theme on?"

Peggy: "Did you ever try paper?"

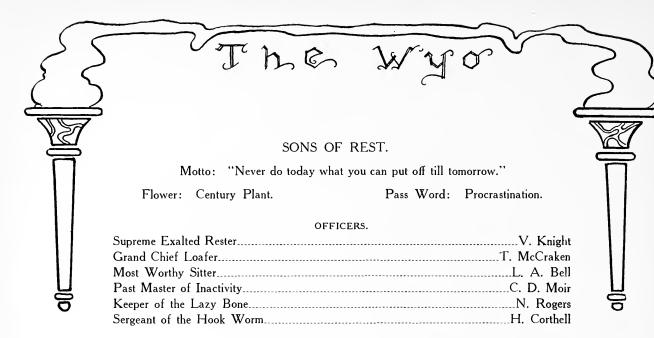

The fallen leaves lie on the ground,

Where they have fallen off the trees; The naked trees stand all around,

Above the leaves from off these trees.

Prof. Steik: "I may be mistaken, but I thought I heard you talking during my lecture."

Mabel Knight: "You're mistaken, professor; I never talk in my sleep."

Here's to the most patient man in the University—Jim Laughlin.

Consider the ways of the little cucumber, which never does its best fighting until it is down.

She smiles at you so coyly you cannot help but fuss her, But when you flunk in Chemistry, I fear, my friend, you'll cuss her.

Out on a spoonholder,
No one nigh;
Moonlight soft,
So was I.
One little kiss,
No one to see.
I enjoyed it,
So did she.

PEGGY GETS A CALL-DOWN.

Peggy (talking to John A. over the telephone): "All right, then; I'll see the preacher."

Mrs. Knight: "Why, Margaret, it is generally customary to let the man arrange that part of it."

Rowley (at the Commons): "Please, sir, does Mr. Mallery eat here all the time?"

Thompson: "No, just three times a day."

ING

Captain Pete Irwin (at drill): "At parade rest lend the beft knee."

McCraken (reporting on silver bullion): "The treasury then bought the bouillon."

Cook: If you really love the girl, why don't you tell her so?

Eugenia N.: Not knowing him, I cannot well suggest a definite procedure for winning him, but as you say, smiles are usually effective with men.

J. Anderson: You will surely miss your calling if you do not take up newspaper work. Your "Yellow Number" was a big success.

Williams: I cannot advise you in these columns. Please send a self-addressed envelope.

Pete: Yes, you are right. Any girl that would hit a boy with a hard-boiled egg certainly would not remain true for life. Beefsteak is good for black eyes.

Ole: No, do not insist on Tina's holding hands.

Esther O.: Your mother is right. Throw your box of rouge out of the window.

Spielmann: Yes, there are many instances of actors falling in love with leading ladies. From your letter we would say that your case is progressing nicely.

Ethel P.: No, the difference in the ages of yourself and the young class president is not enough to prevent a closer tie than that of friendship. Yes, you might invite him over for Sunday evening supper at the Dorm, but not oftener than once a month.

Bower: Be of good cheer; you may find someone in the near future who will appreciate your extraordinary qualities, and your ability to pay a compliment.

Sutty: Yes, since you say the young lady's parents are favorable to you, all that remains is to get the young lady's consent. From all reports, the climate at Sheridan should be beneficial to your health.

Mabel K.: Not knowing the circumstances in the case, we cannot advise you fully. Ordinarily we should say that a letter each day during Christmas vacation is permissible.

Mildred D.: If the young man is as attentive as you say, you might accept his company now and then.

Esther D.: Yes, it was unfortunate that the young man did not take any money to church. You might avoid future embarrassment by taking some yourself.

Grace L.: No, it is not necessary to accept attentions from a Senior in order to be popular. Basketball captains are considered quite desirable catches at most colleges.

speech to take air at a favorable window, did hearken unto the labor of these of the tribe of '15, and anon was there wide alarm throughout all places.

In the seventh hour of the night, which is hard upon the rising of the sun, two brethren of hostile mind did procure much liquid of red hue, and d'spatch forthwith with intent to smear all ye goodly work.

Anon did the spirit of unrest seize upon all that dwelt in the region.

Confusion did arise, like unto the speech of two faculty members in the library, and kinsmen of three tribes did compass about the place.

Even females hastened over the land, like unto Brown when he hiketh for the joys of Reception Room No. 3. And anon there ensued a conflict of great magnitude, between the allied tribes of '15 and '16 and the hordes of Lebhart.

And straightway did the damsels from the neighboring inn enter into the strife also, even as Delilah of old.

Forthwith did the battle wax exceeding warm, even after the rising of the sun, so that the field thereabout did appear like unto a Roman arena.

Albeit, while the battle did rage, the allied tribes did avail themselves of strategy, by means whereof possession was had of a small porch, held by the enemy.

Whereupon was there exceeding great strife for a short space with the occupants thereof; yet were they overcome, and bound with thongs. Straightway was a council of war held among the allied tribes, and swift runners dispatched to procure hempen cords with which to scale the house-top.

And while the runners were yet afar off, lo, there did appear an ambassador of peace, who with fatherly admonitions and warnings did exact a truce for a short space. And immediately was there great rejoicing among the tribe of Lebhart, and among the allied tribes also; yet were the damsels from the neighboring inn loath to leave.

Albeit, being sorely famished and in need of balm for their wounds, did they depart unto their habitations.

And to this day there existeth not an understanding as to which tribe did most prevail in the conflict.

SMALLPOX NEVERMORE.

Once upon an evening dreary,
As some maidens blithe and cheery,
Nibbling cookies, eating candy,
Dreaming not of coming woe,
Gaily chatted, work ignoring.
Suddenly a call imploring
Came from Dolly, sick and fainting,
As she dropped upon the floor.
"'Tis the smallpox," someone muttered,
As we hastened from the door,
"Only this and nothing more."

Women's Hall was filled with sorrow; "Vaccination on the morrow," Said the doctor; "no admittance," And he firmly closed the door.

Anxiously next morn we waited, Faces white and breath abated.

As we bared our arms and watched him Carving those who'd come before.
Oh, the piteous cries and shrieking,
As we hastened from the door—
"Vaccination—never more."

Thus in mingled joy and sorrow
Came and went each long tomorrow,
Till our anxious "term" was finished
And we slept in peace once more.
Dolly's smallpox, though a fable,
Will, in days to come, enable Us who bore the fright so calmly (?)
To cry staunchily o'er and o'er,
With the multitude who tremble
When a germ comes nigh the door,
"Microbes! Smallpox! Nevermore!"
—With apologies to E. A. Poe.

Think More Spend Less

Why is it that the average man is worth so much less in money and property than we have a right to expect him to be? It isn't because he doesn't make the money, for the average man is industrious and has earned from $10,000.00 to $30,000.00 in the past ten years. It is because he doesn't give much serious thought either to his income or outgo. Serious thought would teach him the true value of a dollar; then he would spend carefully and deposit steadily. That system soon places any man ahead of his fellows. Your account is invited here.
